A Directory of Resources for Queer South Asian Women
in Metro Vancouver, BC

2021 - 2022

Please note individuals noted in this resource list are not all Queer but all are Queer-friendly.

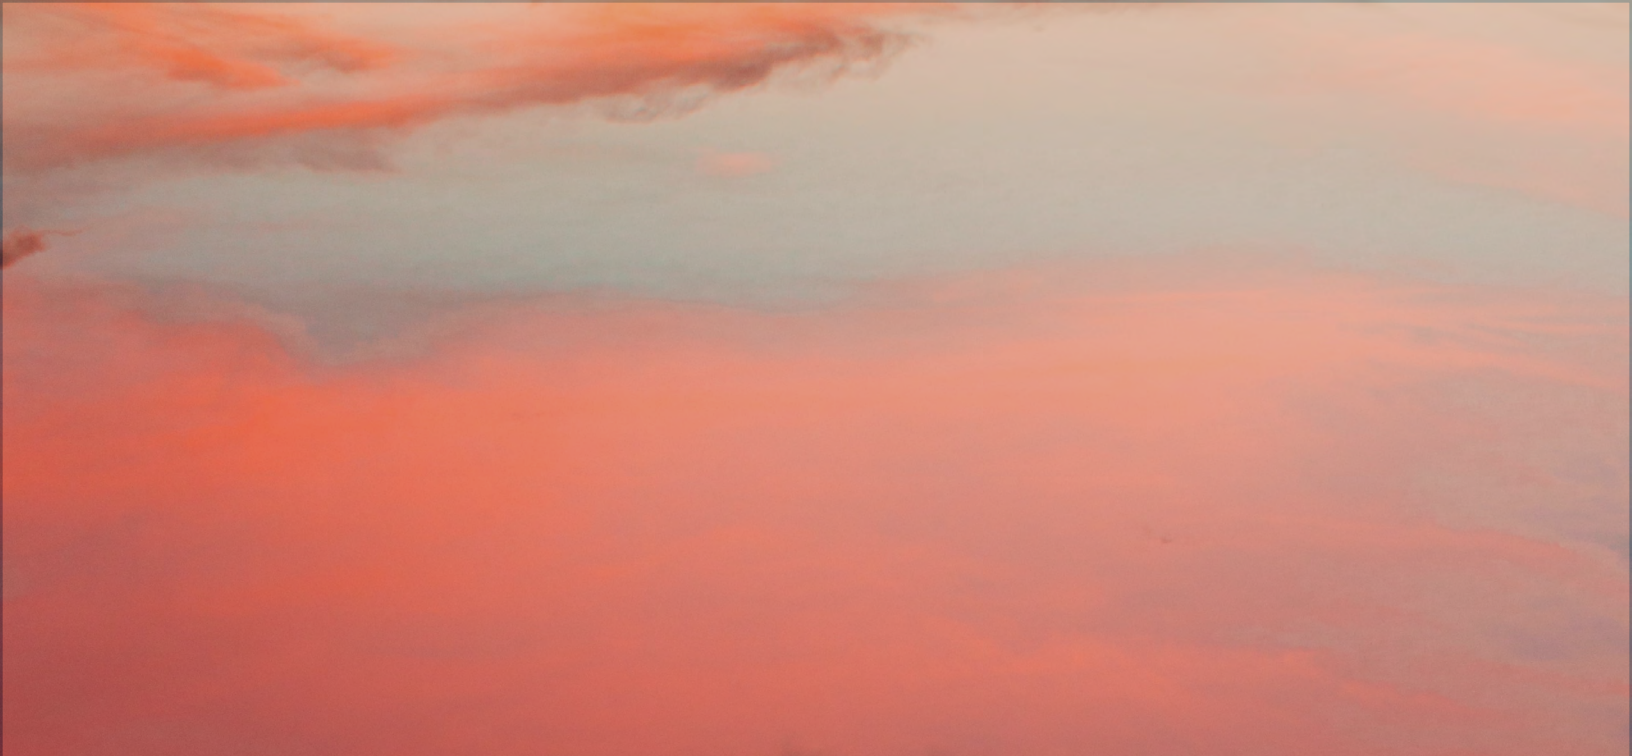

Two individuals contributed to the compilation of this list:

Meet Neery

Neery is Queer South Asian womxn of colour breaking boundaries through her work in the trades. She's a fierce advocate for all marginalized folx and volunteers her time supporting others who need help from young migrant/refugee youth to sponsoring a 2SLGBTQ+ person from abroad. She loves learning and making new connections in her community. Creating this resource list is one small way she is working to bring Queer women in the South Asian community together.

Meet NT

NT is a bad-ass, passionate Queer South Asian womxn of colour. She is an educator by profession and social activist by heart. She enjoys supporting her community in a variety of random ways, forming deep connections and exploring beauty and love in all the places around her.

Tasveer

tasveer.org

It's 2001 and the 9/11 attacks have just shaken the entire world. The aftermath of these attacks left South Asians feeling the weight of fear, racism, hate, and crimes that were on the rise against them. Troubled by the stereotyped and highly prejudicial images of South Asians in the mainstream media at the time, Farah Nousheen and Rita Meher decided to change the narrative. Their quest for better representation led to the founding of Tasveer (meaning 'picture' in Hindi & Urdu) in March 2002, in Seattle. And their aim was to recast the harmful labels by providing a glimpse into the lives of South Asians through film, art, and storytelling.
